

Bakersfield Condors

December 9th, 2003

The Crash Test Dummies and CHIpper "chill" on the ice with some new friends at the Bakersfield Condors game in December. CHIpper dropped the puck to begin the game in which the Condors lost to the Charlotte Checkers, 4 to 1.

One of the benefits of having a presence at the sporting events is the opportunity for the OTS staff and the Crash Test Dummies to interact one-on-one with fans of all ages. Here, Vince & Larry take time out to remind some Condors fans to use their head and always buckle-up! Reaching young drivers, and soon-to-be drivers, with life-saving messages is a priority for the OTS.

OTS staffer Victoria Behbahani helps two young fans with a seatbelt safety question on an OTS scratcher ticket. The tickets, a new item this year, are a big hit with attendees. Eager fans are challenged to answer multiple questions about occupant protection, alcohol-related crashes and DUI prevention. The payoff for a correct answer? A better understanding of traffic safety practices and a special OTS Glo-pen or Glo-necklace!

Representatives from the OTS and California Highway Patrol, along with the Crash Test Dummies and CHiPper, posed behind their concourse table at the Bakersfield Centennial Garden before the start of the game. The traffic safety team handed out hundreds of educational traffic safety materials and prizes to eager Condors fans, and reminded all of the game-goers to "Always buckle-up!"
